PART A (75 MARKS): ANSWER ALL THE QUESTIONS

QUESTION 1

The Kingdom of Itqan is a monarchy headed by Sultan Saleem. The Sultan is the Supreme Leader of the country who is elected by members of Shura. As an Islamic nation, its constitution has provided that the state shall vest the real sovereignty to the only God and no others in all aspects. The Kingdom consists of various tribes and races such as Bani Asad, Bani Kharraj, Bani Layth, Bani Thur and Bani Qursh. Unfortunately, there are ongoing disputes between these races as Bani Qursh firmly believes that they are the noblest race among others as most of their members are the one who actively contribute to the economy of the nation.

One day, the Kingdom is stricken by severe crisis of famine. Many people starve and the citizens start to steal food in order to survive. Imad, a member of Bani Thur is caught off red-handed while trying to steal a loaf of bread and a bottle of milk from a bakery shop owned by Salama, a member of Bani Qursh. Salama insists the government to punish Imad according to Hadd punishment.

Based on the Islamic legal philosophy and its sociological theory, discuss the possible concept to be assimilated into the social situation in the Kingdom of Itqan. Support your answer with relevant authorities from Al-Quran and Hadith.

QUESTION 2

"... Today I have perfected your religious law for you, and have bestowed upon you the full measure of My blessings ..."

– Surah Al-Maidah (5):3

Islam is a complete and comprehensive religion which covers all aspects of life inclusive of the fundamental rights as a human being in this worldly life. It is crucial to take note that the principle of human rights in Islam does not confine to the Muslims only. The principles are universal in nature and should be applicable for the non-Muslims too.

Based on the statement above, compare and contrast the following principles from Islamic and Western perspective:
